Linda had Critical Illness Insurance

After four months of experimental treatment in a leading breast cancer specialist's program, Linda's prognosis is excellent. She's had high health care bills, because her medical insurance didn't cover experimental treatment. And she's looking forward to running her consulting company at full speed again.

But Linda's going to take it easy for a few more months, just to be sure. She can afford the best medical care – and to take time away from her business.

Critical Illness insurance helps you make it through the financial hardships people so often face when they become critically ill. It pays an up-front, tax-free<sup>1</sup> cash benefit when you are diagnosed<sup>2</sup> with a covered illness or condition.
